

Jake Corning is a mechanical engineer and product manager for standard robotic systems at Acieta. He's responsible for communicating with customers, vendors and internal teams to ensure manufacturers get standard robotic automation solutions that meet their specific needs. With a bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering from the University of Wisconsin-Madison, Jake has more than six years of hands-on experience in automation and industrial machine design